

ORPHEUM THEATRE 1927

Built for Vaudeville, this was once the largest theatre in Canada and the Pacific Northwest. The Granville entryway, built in the Second Renaissance style, leads to the main hall, home of the Vancouver Symphony Orchestra. This elegant building has continuously operated as a cultural centerpiece, bringing in world-class musicians and performers from around the globe. 884 Granville Street – 2,800 Seats

COMMODORE BALLROOM 1929

This venue, with its decorative tile, was designed by H.H. Gillingham. It remains today, an outstanding example of the Art Deco style. This multi-level complex features the famous Commodore Ballroom, the five-pin Commodore Lanes & Billiards and numerous modern shops at street level. 868 Granville Street – 1,000 Seats

SCOTIABANK DANCE CENTRE 1929

One of the street's newest tenants, The Dance Centre is 32,000 square feet of history. Its magnificent glass-enclosed, seven-story structure is centered solely around dance arts. Collaborative architect and designer, Arthur Erickson has restored the building with deliberate, complementary contrast, featuring reflective glass which is translucent and floating. Sprung floors protect the dancers' bodies in prolonged practice sessions – straight-ahead design to accommodate ever-evolving forms of artistic expression. Davie & Granville Streets – 150-Seat Production/Performance Space

ANNUAL EVENTS AND ENTERTAINMENT

Every year Granville Street plays host to a number of wonderful events and festivities for everyone to enjoy including the Roger's Santa Claus Day Parade, which includes a special visit from old St. Nick himself; The CanWest Comedy Festival which showcases popular events in many Granville Street venues; and Vancouver's Annual Celtic Festival and St. Patrick's Day Parade, attracting over 30,000 people to enjoy Celtic music, dance, and arts at over 18 venues and stages located in Vancouver's own Entertainment District.

Granville Street is entertainingly different because it offers a unique blend of venues that contribute to an electric mix of flavours and entertainment that can't be matched. Come and experience the uniqueness of Granville Street.

See inside of brochure for a more detailed map of The Entertainment District.

Granville Timeline & Heritage Information

1880s The frontier logging village of Granville gives way to the City of Vancouver.

1910s A construction boom hits the city and the Hudson's Bay is built at the corner of Georgia & Granville Streets.

1920s Granville Street becomes "Theatre Row" with the development of three large theatres as a result of the popularity of "talkies."

1940s With numerous theatres Granville is the entertainment heart of Vancouver. The extensive display of neon leads to the nickname "The Great White Way."

1960s "Theatre Row" becomes a major cultural centre with the expansion of restaurants, clubs and art facilities.

1990s The City of Vancouver designates Granville Street as "The Entertainment District" and large-scale refurbishment of the street continues.
